

How to make a paracord zipper pull

by mark_well on February 12, 2014

Intro: How to make a paracord zipper pull

There are quite a few different ways of making a paracord zipper pull. The one I will show you is one of the simplest, yet one of the best looking. The knot we will be using is called the cobra knot and is the very same knot used in the regular paracord bracelet. Making just a few of these knots will create a beautiful and more importantly, functional zipper pull. If you want additional zipper pull designs, try Paracord guild, my website.

For the supplies, you will need a rather short piece of paracord (depending on how many knots you will use), some scissors to cut the extra ends off and a lighter to melt the ends.

This zipper pull design is great because you can use it to fix broken zipper pulls, as well as make it over the regular zippers to make zippers easier to use.

Now let's see how to make a paracord zipper pull.

